THE PRESIDENT . . .

OWNER RALPH C. WILSON, JR.

Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. is a man of diverse interests. If he had not been there might not be a Buffalo Bills football team today.

It took a man of Wilson's strong sports interest and financial stability to consider risking millions of dollars on an American Football League franchise in Buffalo back in October, 1959.

And the tall Detroit insurance executive saw his Bills through the formative and warring years with the established National Football League without flinching over the drain on his finances.

He, too, reveled in each Bills victory with the enthusiasm of the most ardent Buffalo fan.

It has ever been his aim to have the Bills be synonymous with the word champion. The 1964 and 1965 Bills gave him that pleasure and Buffalo fans, in response to those championship performances, began filling War Memorial Stadium frequently.

The merger of the AFL and NFL, in which Wilson played a leading role, has whet his appetite for a new challenge—to see the Bills one day emerge as Super Bowl winners.

"When I started the Buffalo franchise my goal was to get it established. Then, came the challenge of seeing a champion put together. Now I can't think of any bigger challenge in pro football than aiming at winning the division, the league, and the Super Bowl within a few weeks of one another," Wilson explained.

One thing is certain, win or lose, Wilson will be on the scene when the Bills play. The games he has missed can be counted on the fingers of one hand. For example, a business conference in Europe on Saturday hasn't prevented him reaching a Buffalo game site on Sunday.

At home, he views the action from a pressbox vantage point. On the road, where pro-Bills sentiment isn't overwhelming, he does his rooting from the sidelines near the Buffalo bench.

And it's always with the resolve of the Bills bringing major league championship glory to Buffalo.

THE ORGANIZATION . . .

ROBERT T. LUSTIG

To most Buffalonians the American Football League still was only a pleasant contemplation. The Buffalo franchise awarded Detroit insurance executive Ralph C. Wilson, Jr., in October, 1959, had neither staff nor office.

But to Robert T. (Bob) Lustig, a Wilson aide, the AFL and Buffalo franchise were time demanding, contract-talking realities.

Today Lustig looks back at the experience and wonders at the temerity of fighting the firmly entrenched National Football League for college talent.

"We certainly didn't have much to offer in prestige. But we went sailing right in," he grins.

Michigan halfback Darrell Harper was the first player Lustig signed. And, with some note of pride, he recalls that Harper was on the 33-man roster when the Bills—as they became known as—opened the 1960 season.

Lustig recalls signing talks with others on that first draft list. Players like East Texas State center Jon Gilliam, whose rights were later traded to the Dallas Texans; Wichita fullback Ted Dean, who made the Philadelphia Eagles only to have a non-football injury end his career, and Texas halfback Rene Ramirez, who never did try pro football.

Time has erased other names. That same time passage, however, has drawn Lustig to the foreground of the Bills organization.

He now handles the myriad of duties his title of Vice President-General Manager suggest. He's the top operational officer in the Bills organization.

After a year of dividing time between Buffalo and Detroit, Lustig was named Vice President and a club director in 1964.

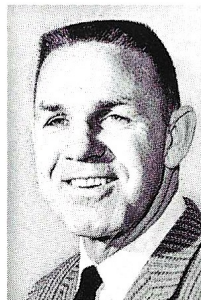

He took over operation of the front office at that point, assuming the additional title of General Manager last year.

Soft-spoken and possessed of a ready wit, Lustig finds his position both demanding and rewarding.

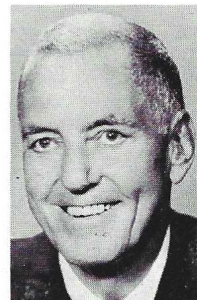

"For thirty-eight weeks you plan, plot, map, debate, negotiate, sign, draft, trade, hire, fire, buy, and sell, always with the idea of producing a winner in mind.

"Then for 14 games you live and die with every twist and turn of fortune on the football field. The taste of defeat is worse than ashes. And time quickly runs away with the victories."

It's a demanding and rewarding business.

Duncan Lectka

Patrick J. McGroder

Jack Horrigan

The Bills, like other successful organizations, is departmentalized.

While Lustig oversees the overall conduct of day-to-day business, individual departments are the responsibility of Patrick J. McGroder, Jack Horrigan, and Duncan Lectka.

McGroder, who joined the Bills as Vice President and member of the Board of Directors in '62, handles the club's advertising and special assignments at the management level.

Horrigan, like McGroder a native Buffalonian, joined the Bills in June, 1966 as Vice President in charge of Public Relations. He, too, is a Board of Directors member.

Lectka has since '64 been in charge of the Bills' ticket department.

All three brought experience in their field to the Bills organization. McGroder, a successful Buffalo businessman in diverse fields for several years, spent most of his private business life in sales. His interest and connection with professional football goes back two decades and the old Buffalo Bills. He has remained close friends with several club owners through the years.

Horrigan, one-time publicity director of the Buffalo hockey Bisons, spent three years in charge of the American Football League's public relations department under Commissioner Joe Foss before joining the Bills.

He also covered the Bills during their first three years of existence as a sports writer for the Buffalo Evening News.

Lectka was assistant ticket director at Michigan State University, his alma mater, when he was hired by Bills Owner Ralph C. Wilson, Jr.

COACH COLLIER & COMPANY . . .

THE BILLS COACHING STAFF

Adversity makes the man. If this is similarly true of the coach, the Buffalo Bills' Joe Collier can consider himself as having reached the pinnacle.

Adversity certainly beset Collier, his staff, and the Bills in general in '67.

No less than 24 players were injured to the point where they had to miss at least one regular game. Some were sidelined for the entire season. Still others remained in the lineup but had their effectiveness muffled by injury.

The resultant 4-10 won-lost record of the two-time American Football League champions was the poorest in the club's eight-year history.

Collier isn't one to dwell inordinately on the past. His energies and those of his staff are directed towards the future, specifically the 1968 AFL season.

And his staff has been expanded to include Tony Sardisco, one-time All-AFL lineman of the Boston Patriots. The ex-Tulane All-America was a training camp aide last summer but had a high school commitment to fulfill in Shreveport, La., in the fall. Now he has joined Richie McCabe in handling the club's defensive unit. Sardisco will coach the defensive line while McCabe, now in his third year with Buffalo, will direct the overall defense and, specifically, the secondary.

Collier's offensive assistants are backfield coach Johnny Mazur and line coach Jerry Smith. Collier, Mazur, and Smith were members of Lou Saban's staff when the present Denver general manager-head coach took command of the Bills in '62. Collier succeeded Saban as head coach in '66.

Collier's staff remains one of the youngest in pro football. The boss, himself, celebrated his 36th birthday in the spring. Smith and Mazur are 38, Sardisco 36, and McCabe 34.

The comparative youth notwithstanding, the Collier staff has a total of 24 years coaching in pro football and 13 at the college level.

Additionally, Director of Player Personnel Harvey Johnson has a vast coaching background both in Canada and the U.S. Johnson was head coach of the champion Kitchener team in the ORFU for four years in addition to being on the Hamilton and Montreal staffs.

He joined the Bills under Buster Ramsey in '60 and handled the defensive backfield before moving full-time to his present job in '62.

Collier, ironically, is the only member of his staff without pro playing experience. He turned down a New York Giants offer in favor of an opportunity to be a graduate student coach at Western Illinois following his graduation from Northwestern.

The playing positions of the coaches also present a well-rounded picture. Collier was offensive end; Mazur, a quarterback; Smith, an offensive lineman; Johnson, a fullback; McCabe, a defensive halfback, and Sardisco played on both offensive and defensive lines.

EQUIPMENT MGR. TONY MARCHITTE, TRAINER ED ABRAMOSKI

Ability and faithfulness to a task have their own rewards. In the cases of Bills Trainer Ed Abramowski and Equipment Manager Tony Marchitte, it's longevity.

Abramowski is one of the few in the Buffalo organization who can recall first-hand "what it was like back in the early days." That takes the capable Abramowski back to 1960, when the American Football League began.

Marchitte has been his dressing room sidekick and traveling companion since 1961.

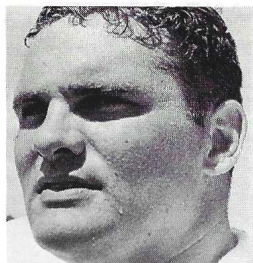

Even during the off-season the two usually are found in the company of one another as they start looking after medical and equipment needs for the following season.

Marchitte's assistant, Ron Krauz, is in his fifth season with the Bills.

Abramowski, a high school football star in Erie, Pa., entered Purdue University on an athletic scholarship. A back injury suffered in his sophomore year, however, ended his playing career--and launched him into training room work.

He has since acquired experience as a physical therapist and prior to joining the Bills was Assistant Trainer with the Detroit Lions and the U.S. Military Academy as well as head of the training department at the University of Detroit.

A pair of long, pressure field goals by debuting Mike Mercer capped a fourth-quarter drive by the Buffalo Bills as they overtook the New York Jets, 20-17. The comeback was ignited by two Jack Kemp-to-Art Powell touchdown passes. Then Mercer booted a Buffalo record 51-yard field goal. Two minutes, 23 seconds later, he decided the outcome with a successful 43 yarder—with only four seconds remaining.

Pass interceptions and punt returns set up all but one of Houston's scores as the youthful Oilers defeated the Bills, 20-3, in a game dominated by defenses. Buffalo, after taking a first quarter lead on Mike Mercer's 47-yard field goal, couldn't get either its passing or running game underway. Rookie Zeke Moore ran back a punt 40 yards to Buffalo's seven yard line to set up the Oilers' go-ahead score.

BILLS	10	0	3	8	—	21
RAIDERS	7	7	7	7	—	28

The Western Division champion Oakland Raiders had to struggle and the closing three minutes of play to pull out a 28-21 victory over the Bills. After a disputed pass interference call gave the Raiders possession on the one-yard line, fullback Hewritt Dixon bulled his way into the end zone for the game clinching score with two minutes, three seconds remaining. It gave Oakland a 13-1 record, the best in AFL history.
